1 sheets, right?

2 We looked at thousands of -- you saw that there were 3 thousands and thousands of pages of information that 4 Miss Bongiorno created during the course of the time that she 5 was at Madoff Securities. Did we know if she balled up every 6 random sheet? I don't know. You saw one because that's an 7 example of what she did. You also saw all of the fake account 8 information, all of the fake client statements that went out 9 time after time, and there's no dispute it was fake.

10 The randomization was part of her job. It was part of 11 Mr. O'Hara and Mr. Perez's job that they were doing on behalf
12 of Miss Crupi. It was a part of Madoff Securities. It was a 13 critical part, and it's one thing that all by itself exposes 14 that these defendants knew that the trading was entirely fake.

15 What's a fifth reason that you should reject this 16 argument that they didn't know that the trading was fake?
17 Well, what about the fact that the accounts that they managed 18 always managed to get this very consistent, reasonable rate of 19 return? Very consistent rate of return, I think some people 20 talked about, was around 18 percent most years. Some of the 21 articles talked about the fact that Bernie was beloved because 22 he had a consistent rate of return.

23 These people have suggested to you that they believed 24 plausibly that Bernard Madoff could pull any security in the 25 market, going back as far as 12 years, just pick any time that

1 it was bought and any sell date and just add that in and it
2 would be totally legit because he had so much market volume.
3 Well, if he could do that, if they really believed that you
4 could do that at any time, why are the rates of return so 5 consistent?

6 THE COURT: Mr. Jackson, please be careful about 7 "they" and "these people" in relation to particular issues and 8 accusations.

9 MR. JACKSON: Absolutely, your Honor. I'm just trying 10 to be efficient, but I will use names.

11 THE COURT: Well, justice demands precision.

12 MR. JACKSON: And all of these demands are reasonable.

13 So just to go back to what we were talking about, why 14 are the rates of return so consistent? Why don't you see some 15 people just popping off of the charts? I mean, wouldn't it 16 have been easy for them to just grab Apple stock right before 17 the iPod was invented on any particular day and, you know, put 18 the sell date of now and have a gabillion dollars in any given 19 day, under their understanding of what Mr. Madoff was capable 20 of doing?

21 And they didn't do that, though. They kept the rates
22 of return for the customers consistent and reasonable. Why?
23 They wanted it to look realistic. They didn't want eye-popping
24 numbers that wouldn't look realistic. That's the only reason.

25 THE COURT: Is the "they," Madoff Securities? Is the 1 "they" particular defendants? Please be precise.

2 MR. JACKSON: Absolutely, your Honor.

3 THE COURT: Thank you.

4 MR. JACKSON: Ms. Crupi and Ms. Bongiorno wanted to 5 keep it looking realistic.

6 Let me move on. What's another reason that you know 7 that they knew that the trading was fake, that you should 8 reject this argument that they didn't know that the trading was 9 fake? Well, their own words tell you that. There was a note 10 that Mr. Riopelle used during the course of the trial. There
11 was a lot of talk about it, where he referenced Miss Bongiorno 12 writing on something, Don't do anything until you hear from 13 Bernie.

14 Don't do anything until you hear from Bernie, what 15 does that note mean? Who has to write a note like that to 16 themselves? A person who will often do things without hearing 17 from Bernie. I mean, you don't have to write that note if 18 Bernie Madoff is the person who gives you detailed instructions 19 on every single thing that you should be doing. You do have to 20 write that note if you are an autonomous individual who manages 21 the fake investment advisory business and often makes your own
22 decisions about how things are supposed to go down. Their own 23 words tell you that they knew that the trading was fake.

24 Let's also look at Government Exhibit 105-B504. This 25 is the other note. If you could blow up the top half,

1 I can't emphasize more what the Judge just said. What 2 I'm saying is argument. What all the defense attorneys have 3 said is argument. But what I'm asking you to do is look at the 4 facts, look at the reality of the situation, and probably after 5 we take a break, I want to focus specifically on the subject of 6 what is argument versus reality.

7 And we'll get to that in a moment, but just to tie up
8 the last thing I was saying about the Wall Street Journal 9 articles and the Bloomberg research. If you think that the 10 trading is actually happening somewhere, why do you need to go
11 to periodicals to research trades? Wouldn't you, at some point 12 in the decades that you were working there, said, well, let's 13 just get the information from the actual trades? Whether it's 14 upstairs or in Europe, why don't we just get the information of 15 the actual trades? Of course you would.

16 You only need to go to the Wall Street Journal to look 17 up historical prices. You only need to go to Bloomberg to do 18 that if you know that what you're doing is a fantasy, it's all 19 made up, and you can do whatever you want. The notion that 20 these defendants didn't know that the trading was fake is an 21 absurdity. It's completely inconsistent with the evidence, 22 with common sense and with logic. You should reject it.

23 And, your Honor, I could continue, or I don't know if 24 this is --

25 THE COURT: Yes, we can take our morning break now.

1 MR. JACKSON: Thank you very much, your Honor.

2 THE COURT: Members of the jury, we'll take our 3 ten-minute morning break now. Thank you for your attentive 4 work. Continue to keep your minds open and your thoughts to 5 yourselves. All rise. Ms. Courtney, would you please escort 6 the jury out.

7 (Jury exits)

8 Please be seated for a moment. So, Mr. Jackson, in 9 the rebuttal in a five-defendant case, where there are hundreds 10 of thousands, if not millions, of page of documents, one has to 11 be -- the government has a responsibility to be accurate when 12 it is purporting to describe evidence. To the extent the 13 government is arguing inferences to be drawn from evidence that 14 may or may not literally say what the government is claiming 15 should be inferred from it, that distinction must be made.

16 And so the theys, the things that sound like 17 quotations that may not be, must be very, very careful, and I'm 18 not saying that I know the record well enough to know whether, 19 you know, every single one of the characterizations of the 20 record was spot on or not, but I do know enough to be 21 concerned. And I know that the prudent way to approach this is 22 to say, you know, you should draw from the evidence as to such 23 conclusion.

24 MR. JACKSON: Your Honor, I will definitely endeavor 25 to be as precise as possible. The only thing I would say with

1 regard to the "they," I'm going to definitely add names and may 2 get more precise. I thought some of the theys I was referring 3 to arguments that I believe all defendants had made, but I'm 4 going to undertake to follow your Honor's good suggestion to 5 add more -- good, good instruction to add more precision. It
6 may lengthen me out just a little bit, but I'm going to do 7 that.

8 THE COURT: Very good. And to the extent you're 9 arguing there was a situation at Madoff Securities and the 10 "they," which it seemed to me sometimes, you can certainly 11 accuse Madoff Securities of whatever you want, but when you say 12 "they" in this courtroom with five individuals here, people who 13 did different functions, that's problematic.

14 MR. JACKSON: Absolutely, Judge.

15 THE COURT: Mr. Frisch?

16 MR. FRISCH: Your Honor, there have been a number of 17 occasions where Mr. Jackson has simply either misstated the 18 records or just made things up. I'm going to address one of 19 them. I think Mr. Breslin, possibly Mr. Krantz has another. I 20 didn't want to object when it happened. I don't like objecting 21 during an adversary's closing statement. I may have to change 22 that preference as we go forward.

23 In talking about what was overheard by Ms. Squillari, 24 Mr. Madoff saying to his brother "Mind your own business, Dan 25 knows how everything works," it was plain that was something

1 she heard. There's no context whatever for it. I believe, I 2 may have, I don't remember, objected to its admission at the 3 time, certainly questioned it. And Mr. Jackson now says it was 4 in response to Peter questioning authority over his realm.
5 That's just made up.

6 And I think it might be prudent for the Court to hear 7 what each of us has to say with regards to that. I request an 8 instruction that that simply isn't in the evidence because it
9 simply isn't in the evidence, and it's a very explosive piece 10 of evidence. "Dan knows how everything works," we don't know 11 the context, but Mr. Jackson just made up his own context and 12 it's inappropriate.

13 THE COURT: Mr. Breslin?

14 MR. BRESLIN: The issue I rose on, your Honor, and I
15 concede that Mr. Jackson, as a matter of fairness, is entitled 16 to a certain degree of latitude --

17 THE COURT: You need to talk a little louder because I 18 told Ms. Prater she could stay there.

19 MR. BRESLIN: Mr. Jackson is entitled to a certain 20 degree of latitude, your Honor, but to say that these 21 defendants controlled the trading, which he said, it not only 22 lumps them all together, but it lumps them all together in 23 something that's utterly fictional, and, really, almost 24 nonsensical after five-and-a-half months. The idea that any of 25 these -- that there's been any testimony that any of these five

1 the statement means, and it is an argument, but it is one that,
2 on this record and in the context of this case, has to be made
3 as one tied to inference from context, not a supposed 4 description of a scenario that was testified to by the witness.

5 This witness didn't say that she had heard what the 6 argument between Bernie and Peter was about. She didn't say 7 what Bernie was reacting to there, and your inference and your 8 contextual extrapolation puts in there, as a fact of the 9 testimony about the conversation, that there was some 10 understanding or knowledge or discussion that Mr. Bonventre had 11 dominion over everything and that, of course is a highly 12 contested fact.

13 MR. JACKSON: I agree, your Honor, it's highly 14 contested. I think it's a fair extrapolation. I will endeavor 15 to make a clear delineation between what is argument and what 16 is what a witness said. I will say, your Honor, I think that 17 each one of the defense counsel during their summations 18 referenced testimony. They made arguments about what the 19 implications were, what that meant. There was interpretation 20 of things that were said by Frank DiPascali, what this really 21 meant.

22 THE COURT: There was a lot of that, and a lot of that 23 was tied to specifically showing the evidence and showing the 24 testimony. And in both the government's opening and in this 25 argument so far, there is an awful lot of absurd, broad brush,

1 unbelievable, they did everything that's not tied particularly 2 to evidence. Mr. Riopelle?

3 MR. RIOPELLE: Indeed, your Honor. I didn't get a 4 chance to make my objection to Mr. Jackson's statement to the 5 jury that Ms. Bongiorno ran the investment advisory business, 6 which I think way overstates her role. And, by gosh, right 7 there on Page 2631 of Eleanor Squillari's testimony, we have 8 the following: Annette worked for Bernie down in what I
9 originally thought was accounting, but it was the investment 10 advisory business. She worked on the accounts downstairs." 11 That's a fair characterization of what went on. She worked for 12 Bernie. She didn't run it. The evidence is completely 13 contrary to that.

14 THE COURT: Your broad conclusions, to the extent
15 they're within the ambit of fair argument, and of course I'm 16 not even going to try to parse statement by statement, should 17 be presented as, you the jury can find from the whole body of 18 evidence here X, but don't try to put something in somebody's 19 mouth that wasn't in that person's mouth.

20 And be very careful whom you accuse of what on what 21 basis. And don't brand each of these people with your 22 institutional thesis. You have to prove your case with respect 23 to each individual and, obviously, it isn't seriously in 24 dispute that the institution was corrupt. The question here is 25 whether these individuals knowingly participated in the

1 corruption. And it is, as you've embraced, the government's 2 burden to prove that, and this is not a situation in which, as 3 with the prior closing arguments any defendants are going to be 4 able to come back and say, well, that had to have been 5 hyperbole because this is what the statement was. So you have 6 an extra responsibility both of persuasion but of accuracy and 7 precision.

8 MR. FRISCH: And, your Honor, the reason I request
9 instruction on that particular point, I don't want to be in a 10 position of objecting during Mr. Jackson's summation going 11 forward on something like this, on this statement, 12 Mr. Bonventre knows how everything works, when it's clear
13 Miss Squillari heard nothing else. That's such a major 14 statement on which the government is relying on, and I objected 15 to it at the time.

16 And I simply ask for an instruction that that 17 statement that Miss Squillari heard was just one thing that she 18 heard, without any other part of the conversation, something of 19 that effect. Take the sting out of what Mr. Jackson did in 20 that regard.

21 THE COURT: Let me ask it to you another way. Are you
22 asking that the particular section of Ms. Squillari's testimony 23 be read?

24 MR. FRISCH: I hadn't thought of that, but I think 25 that would be another way of doing it.

1 MR. RIOPELLE: Why don't we read 2,631, it's all on 2 the page for both of us.

3 MR. JACKSON: Your Honor, I'd be happy, when we come 4 back from the break, to start off by just reading exactly what 5 Ms. Squillari wrote -- said in the testimony.

6 MR. FRISCH: I guess my only problem with that is now
7 they're going to hear it twice, and now we're going to hear
8 another argument about what he said. This is a problem
9 Mr. Jackson has created. I don't know why he had to do it.

10 I guess if you're asking me what relief I'm seeking, 11 the relief I'm seeking is an instruction that Mr. Jackson, in 12 substance, work on the language, put more in this conversation 13 than the witness had heard. All the witness heard was 14 Mr. Madoff's response, not what the question was or not what 15 the conversation was about. That's the request for relief that 16 I seek.
